BALTIMORE, MD.

PREFACE.

The present Part completes the alphabet of the Index-Catalogue of Books in the Library of the Peabody Institute. It contains all references received during the printing, excepting only such as belong to letters previously printed.

These complementary references, whether Author, Subject, Title, or Article, will be included in a second Catalogue soon to follow. The number of books added to the Library since the printing of the various letters has been so great that the collection of titles and references hereafter to be printed will form several large volumes. The Catalogue now completed contains 357,429 references, distributed through five thousand pages. It is an Index-Catalogue of semi-syndetic order, with both alphabetical and classed subdivisions under countries, cities, names of authors and subjects; being fullest and most elaborate where the subject is most extensively represented in the Library.

Close attention has been given to detect errors in this Catalogue, and the table of corrections here placed is the result of close scrutiny of the entire work.

It is a subject of real regret to those who have had the labor of preparing this Catalogue that Dr. Morison did not live to see it completed. He regarded this work as representative of his administration, and he labored with untiring zeal upon the printed papers to render them perfect, and to detect errors which seem inevitable in a work so full of details.

As members of the Library Committee did not favor the classified catalogue system practised in the Library previous to 1869, but preferred the alphabetical one used in the Catalogue of the Boston Public Library, a change of method was suggested. The underlying idea proposed by Dr. Morison, and accepted by the Library Committee, was that of a work in alphabetical order in all parts, collected in short compressed titles. The slips were written in pursuance of this idea; but at that time no analysis beyond contents of books and sets of volumes was suggested, and no arrangement of references for the introduction of bold-face type was invented. The most important correlations constituting the real plan of the work were originated after trial sheets had been printed. It was then that the idea of using broad-face type for the emphatic words in all the closely printed matter was urged upon the attention of the Provost by the present writer, and likewise the triple arrangement of works under an author, as the analysis of Transactions of learned Societies and of periodical literature had been urged before. The arrangement of subdivisions under countries was also mostly developed by the writer, while the organization of the divisions of Greek and Latin Literature, and of the Carlovingian and other mediæval folklore originated with Mr. Troeger, and the articles Shakespeare, Plato, and United States were devised by Mr. Parker. To Mr. Hill, also, credit is due for his close attention to grouping of references and careful reading of proof.

The Catalogue as it now stands is but a first step in that progress which aims to "Satisfy the researches of students," in accordance with the expressed wish of Mr. Peabody. It is now submitted to the consideration of scholars, by whose decision it will take such rank as it merits in the domain of library literature.

P. R. UHLER, Provost.

CORRECTIONS.

The purchase of bibliographical works within the last year has made it possible to give the names of authors in fuller detail than before; but no attempt has been made to supply the full names of authors whose initials only were given in the earlier part of the Catalogue, or such of their Christian names as have recently been discovered.

Note.—Another list of corrections is placed at the beginning of Part I.
